About Helen

Helen M. Mitchell is an executive coach, strategist, professor, consultant and speaker who helps leaders and organizations thrive.

She currently serves as Professor of Ethics, Leadership and Strategy in the Crowell School of Business at Biola University, teaching in both the undergraduate and graduate business programs. She is also the Director of the Talbot Center for Faith, Work & Economics in Biola University's Talbot School of Theology. She is advancing the integration of faith, work and economics within the church and in the marketplace.

Before entering higher education, Helen built an executive career starting with AT&T becoming an Area Vice President. Following her corporate career, Helen architected and co-founded the workplace ministry and initiatives at Saddleback Church. It is from this experience that Helen is working to help people understand how their work is a calling and to equip pastors and churches to more effectively disciple people in their work lives.

She is an ICF Certified Coach, holds a Master of Arts in Organizational Leadership from Biola University and a Master of Arts in Biblical and Theological Studies from the Talbot School of Theology at Biola University and completed the Senior Executive Program at Columbia University.

Her rare combination of executive leadership, organizational leadership, coaching, academic scholarship and ministry experience enables her to connect with audiences across business, nonprofit, education and church settings.
